Access to Data and Documents is Limited

You may experience this if you're stuck at home or on the road but need files from your office or your coworker.

You could also be stuck living with the limitations of a literal paper file that is being passed from one person to another.

People Are Noticing...

If your customers are suggesting that your process takes too long, or they aren't understanding regarding delays you know are attributable to someone hogging the information.

If your coworkers are grumbly over not being able to get their work done because they can't work until you're finished with the actual file.

You're Misplacing Stuff

When some of your documents are in one place, some are in another, and you spend time searching for what you need instead of doing the work you need to do.

You're struggling to find and share stuff with others because you're working with "organized chaos" and "messy desk syndrome".

You're Frustrated and Drained

You know there's a better way, but you don't have the energy to do one more thing that isn't directly related to getting your job done.

You're tired of waiting on others and asking for status updates and just want to do your job with less "waiting around".

Your “Secure Storage” is ... Limited

With customer privacy and PII, you’re relying on your office’s security system or the locked front door to keep from exposing vulnerable information.

You’re hoping your occasionally rotated “universal password” stands up to ambitious hackers.

Working Out = Moving and Searching for Files

When your office is still pushing around carts of paper and you’re feeling the weight of being stuck in the 90s.

You’re tired of walking around trying to find what you need from the sundry paper filing cabinets you have.
